DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Claims 1-27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Salvo et al. in view of Shavit et al.

Salvo et al. disclose or inherently teach all of the limitations of the claims including forecasting based on trends and economic indicators (See, for example, Col. 3, lines 40-62) but the reference lacks the specific teaching of using the system with a plurality of stores and providing access to forecasted sales to a supplier; the plurality of variables including historical performance of promotion products, weather, competitor activity, a marketing/promotional calendar with supply chain member access, a forecast of a promotion of the stores, charging a fee to the supplier based on a number of products sold, and cannibalization of a product.

Shavit et al. teach an interactive supply chain management system for a plurality of stores, suppliers, and manufacturers whereby store data can be selectively accessed by other supply chain members. The system including access to computing services such as forecasting (See, for example, Col. 7, line 19).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Salvo et al. to include using the system with a plurality of stores whereby store data including forecasted data can be accessed by other supply chain members, in view of Shavit et al., in order to achieve "dramatic new efficiencies" within the marketplace (See Shavit et al., Col. 1, lines 60-68).

Art Unit: 3627

It would have been an obvious design choice to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to further modify Salvo et al. to: have the plurality of variables include historical performance of promotion products, weather, competitor activity; a marketing/promotional calendar with supply chain member access; a forecast of a promotion of the stores; charging a fee to the supplier based on a number of products sold, and cannibalization of a product; as the variables are well known in marketing/forecasting to determine future demand for a product; a calendar of events for access by supply chain members is well known management in order to keep organized and thus maintain efficiency; a forecast of promotion of the stores is well known in order to determine future visits by customers to the stores; charging a fee to a supplier is well known, for example a patent royalty fee for when a supplier sells goods to competing stores; and cannibalization is well known in business to occur when one promoted product is sold along with a non-promoted product (See, for example, Webster's Dictionary, tenth edition, "cannabilize").

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-18 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection necessitated by amendment.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

Art Unit: 3627

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
